AN EMIGRANT AT SEVENTY YEARS.

The Story of the Old French Gardener who Died on Wards Island Last Week.

From the New York Sun.

Among the steerage passengers landed at Castle Garden from the steamship Germanic on Sep't. 27, 1878, was an old Frenchman named George Schauer. It is told by law that an immigrant more than 60 years old, who has no one to provide for his support, must be returned to the country from which he comes, lest he become a charge upon any of the public charities. Schauer, who was over 70, was therefore questioned closely before he was permitted to remain. He said that he had a brother in Brooklyn, but was otherwise alone in the world, and that, to join his brother, he had sold a small farm and come to America, bringing $5,000 in gold with him. He said that he was a gardener, and as he was a vigorous man for his years, and showed a spirit of quiet determination, the authorities became interested in him and allowed him to go his way. He went to a boarding house near the Battery, and began a search for his brother in Brooklyn. After three weeks he found from the public records that the brother had died a few years before.

Two Italians at the boarding house learned that the old Frenchman had money, and tried to persuade him to go with them to Canada. He refused to go. At length the Italians began to prepare for their journey, and just before the time fixed for their departure came to the old man with a small black bag, the counterpart of the one that contained his gold. They opened it and showed him that it contained what were apparently rolls of coin. They broke one roll open, showed him a $20 gold piece at the broken end, and asked him to take charge of this bag while they went out on some business. He sat patiently in the room where they had left him, guarding the supposed treasure. They did not return. He went finally to his own room. His bag of gold was gone. The bag he had been taking care of contained short pieces of lead pipe wrapped in paper, and weighing altogether about twenty pounds.

The Frenchman was heartbroken. He reported at Castle Garden the story of his misfortune. Detective Reilly of the City Hall police traced the thieves to Philadelphia and on board a European steamer. About six months ago they were reported to be in Paris. The old gardener might have been returned to France but he begged to be allowed to remain here, offering to do anything rather than return homeless and penniless to his native place. The Emigration Commissioners gave him work at gardening on the lands of the department on Ward's Island. He worked there faithfully until a short time ago, when he fell sick. Last week he died. He had saved money to pay for his burial, and among his effects were papers showing that he had reached a Master Mason's degree in the Grand Orient of France, and the blue regalia of that Order. There was also a marriage certificate, issued by the prefecture of the Seine, and dated Sept. 1844. The groom, George Schauer, is reported in it as having been born in Neuville, on the lower Raine, in 1806. The bride's name was Victoria Charlotte Gillet, and she was a native of L'Isle Adam, in the Department of the Seine and Oise, the daughter of Jean Gillet and Françoise Godard.

Superintendent Kane of Ward's Island took charge of the funeral. The faded blue regalia of the Grand Orient was laid on the old Frenchman's body, and it was buried in consecrated ground.

Swapped Wives.

From the N. Y. Sun.

The case of two Indiana husbands who agreed to swap wives, by means of divorce, is curious. The couples were intimate friends, and the trade has been amicably carried out. Dr. Baumuller went to St. Louis on his honeymoon tour. "Mr. Richter and I," he said to a Republican reporter, "are like brothers. Not very long ago I discovered that I loved Mrs. Richter better than I did my own wife, and that she preferred me to her husband. I also discovered that Mr. Richter and my wife stood in exactly the same relation to each other. What were to do? Quarrel? It was useless. I had tried to suppress my feelings, and I would have done so if I had not found that Lena, my wife, loved Richter and that Richter loved Lena. We did not quarrel; we arranged everything. We met, all four, Richter, Mrs. Richter, myself and wife, at Richter's house, and there we talked the matter over until we concluded the best thing to be done was to seek divorce." Dr. Baumuller is a reputable physician with a large practice. Richter has been a Street Commissioner, and is wealthy. In one respect he seems to get the best of the bargain, for his new wife is 29, while his old wife is 50, and he is 60. Baumuller is 39.

PUBLIC TEACHERS.

An exchange has a squib which will be relied upon by the school teachers. A school tax election was in progress in Lyon county, and a patriot was expressing, near one of the polling places, his lamentations about what he considered the extravagant salaries paid to teachers. In a voice which could be heard a wail of regret for the good times which are gone, he said: "Why, when I went to school the teacher only got $18 a month." A bystander mildly observed, "Well, if you are a fair sample of his teachings, it was a pretty steep price to pay." That is not exactly a fair way to put it. As a usual thing there is no class of salaried persons that is more overpaid than teachers. It comes simply from the fact that good teachers will have good pay, and the duds and leatherheads take the benefit of the tariff. School Trustees are not always the men who know most about educational matters, and school teachers are generally selected because they are harmless and eminently appropriate men without an idea above an oyster. Take nine male teachers out of ten as they run and they ought to be chopping wood. The work which they do could be better spared than paid for.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

George E. Saintsbury, one of the ablest of the younger English critics, thus concludes an essay in Scribner for May on Carlyle's literary work:

"Hardly any writer at any time has seen during his life-days so many new forms of speech, invented by himself, pass into the general dictionary of phrase. None in our time at least has displayed such varied power of prose writing in the most opposite styles and on the most widely differing subjects; in none, certainly, are the four qualities of copious and careful information, fresh and original style, earnest purpose, and, pervading the whole, a vein of the soundest common sense, safeguarding the most audacious paradox and tinging down the most eccentric metaphor, so eminently present. This, at least, all sound criticism is disposed to allow very much more. The admirable image in which the leader of the younger generation of English men of letters has described Mr. Carlyle will always recur to some memories."

"Storm-god of the northern foam, Strength of rock that breasts and breaks the sea, And thunders back its thunder rhyme for rhyme, Answering as though to outrun the tides of time."

Geo. W. Tyler, the bully ragging attorney, met more than his match in San Francisco the other day, in the person of Mrs. Clara S. Foltz, the opposing counsel in a case in which Tyler was both plaintiff and counsel and Mrs. Foltz was the attorney for the defendant. Mrs. Foltz won a point, which so enraged Tyler that he said, in that peculiarly offensive way of his: "Counsel had better be engaged in other business: a woman's place is at home raising her children." Mrs. Foltz looked straight into Tyler's face and replied instantly: "A woman had better be engaged in almost any business than in raising such men as you are, sir." Clara took the cake, amidst the plaudits of the Court, the bar, and the spectators.

The Robertson nomination is still the all-absorbing topic in the East. Western Senators declare that they will vote for executive session in order to get a consideration of the Chinese Treaty. Gorham et al. are still firm, and Conkling, while denying that he is responsible for the dead-lock, says he is ready and willing to meet the President in battle array, and will fight Robertson to the death. Robertson now proclaims that he alone is responsible for his candidacy. We agree with George William Curtis, that if the President believes in any shade of civil service reform he should compel Conkling to recognize that he is only a Senator from New York.

John Kelly is once more boss of Tammany. When kicked out last fall, John was heard to remark with a Catalinian chuckle, "I go but I return." The democracy of New York does not understand just how it can be controlled by Kelly, but the boss knows exactly how it can be accomplished. The Sun lets itself down slowly by saying, "Barely escaping defeat."

The Carson papers have been trying the case of the Sing Hop Company vs. Steamboat Ditch Company in print, on information furnished by Ah Quong. Quong is only an agent of the company and an agent with a decidedly unsavory reputation. He is not worthy of belief in any matter wherein he is interested.

They say now if Secretary Win-dom's plan of substitution succeeds he will find it difficult to spend the money which will accumulate. It is to be expected, however, that one who could conceive the plan would naturally know what to do with its profits.

Says the Phoenix, A. T., Gazette: The Webb colony at Gila Bend is a failure, as the parties who went with him had not any money. Webb has his irrigating ditch finished. Mr. Ballis, of Gridley, California, will be here in a few days and join Webb, and they propose to bring implements, men and farm the land.

A narrow-gauge railroad 30 miles long, from Bodie to the extensive timber region south of Mono Lake, is to be immediately constructed. The survey, as adopted, is 3½ miles long. The completion of the road will open up an almost unlimited source of wood and timber supply, tapping directly one tract of 12,000 acres of choice woodland, now owned by the Mono Lake Railroad Company.

In Tuscarora Mr. C. A. Richardson has at his place a curiosity in the shape of a portion of a fossil jaw-bone, which was recently found 25 feet below the surface in a shaft in Lone Mountain district. It evidently belonged to an animal of the equine species, although one of the teeth, which is nearly perfect and entire, indicates that it was part of an animal larger than the present race of horses. It was firmly imbedded in sandstone, a portion of which still remains fastened to the bone.

Much is being said by our exchanges says the Genoa Courier, of the newly discovered copper mines west of town, though perhaps not more than their wealth and importance will justify. But little work has been done on the mines and their wealth is unknown. Altogether there are ten or twelve locations, all apparently on the same ledge. At least three of these, the Gray Eagle, Fairview and Germain, will be thoroughly and systematically prospected. It is admitted by everyone that the out-look is favorable for the development of several rich mines here.

T. J. Lewis returned to Galeyville, Arizona, from Fort Wingate, New Mexico, Friday of last week with glowing accounts of the coalfields he and his friends had located. The area covers some 1,200 acres, for which the Railroad Company has offered $80,000.

The robber shot by Sheriff Smiley, of Trinity county, Cal., died April 27th at Weaverville, and his remains were brought to Shasta. Detective Hume says that the dead robber is the famous John Brown, who robbed the La Porte and Oroville stage on the 30th of last November.

John G. Robeson, charged with the murder of J. W. Robb, had a preliminary examination at Astoria Wednesday. Circumstantial evidence, fastening the guilt on the prisoner, is stronger even than at the inquest. Robeson declined to make a statement and was held to answer.
